THE 40TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE 1967 REFERENDUM

1967 FCAATSI advertisement.

Reproduced courtesy of National Library of Australia and Dr Barry Christophers

Photograph of a protest in Sydney. Faith Bandler (on right) was one of the main leaders in the campaign

Reproduced courtesy of AIATSIS. DIRECTIONS.

If you DO NOT APPROVE the proposed law, write the word I

DO POU APPROVE the proposed law for the alteration of to Iter the Constitution so that the 7 the Number of Senators"?

in the space provided opposite the question.

A proposed law

To alter the constitution so as to omit certain words relating to the people of the Aboriginal race in any state and so that the Aboriginals are to be counted in reckoning the population.

Commonwealth advertisement, The West Australian, 1 May 1967.

Our personal sense of justice, our common sense, and our international reputation in a world in which racial issues are being highlighted every day, require that we get rid of this outmoded provision.

Commonwealth of Australia, Referendum document, 6 April 1967

Before 1967 you had to apply for citizenship rights. They'd check up with the police what kind of person you were, then write you a letter saying if you got it or not. My Dad applied but they refused because he was known to have a drink and he lived in a camp.

Pat Kopusar, Yes Aborigines do count, Wangka Maya, Pilbara Aboriginal Language Centre, May 1992.

On 27 May 1967, 90.77% of Australian voters recorded the largest ever 'Yes' vote in a referendum to alter the Australian constitution. This referendum finally enabled Aboriginal people to be counted in the national census and to be subject to Commonwealth laws, rather than just state laws. Many Aboriginal people considered that changing sections of the Federal Constitution was essential in gaining formal recognition of their existence as people of their own country. Only four referenda prior to 1967 had been passed.

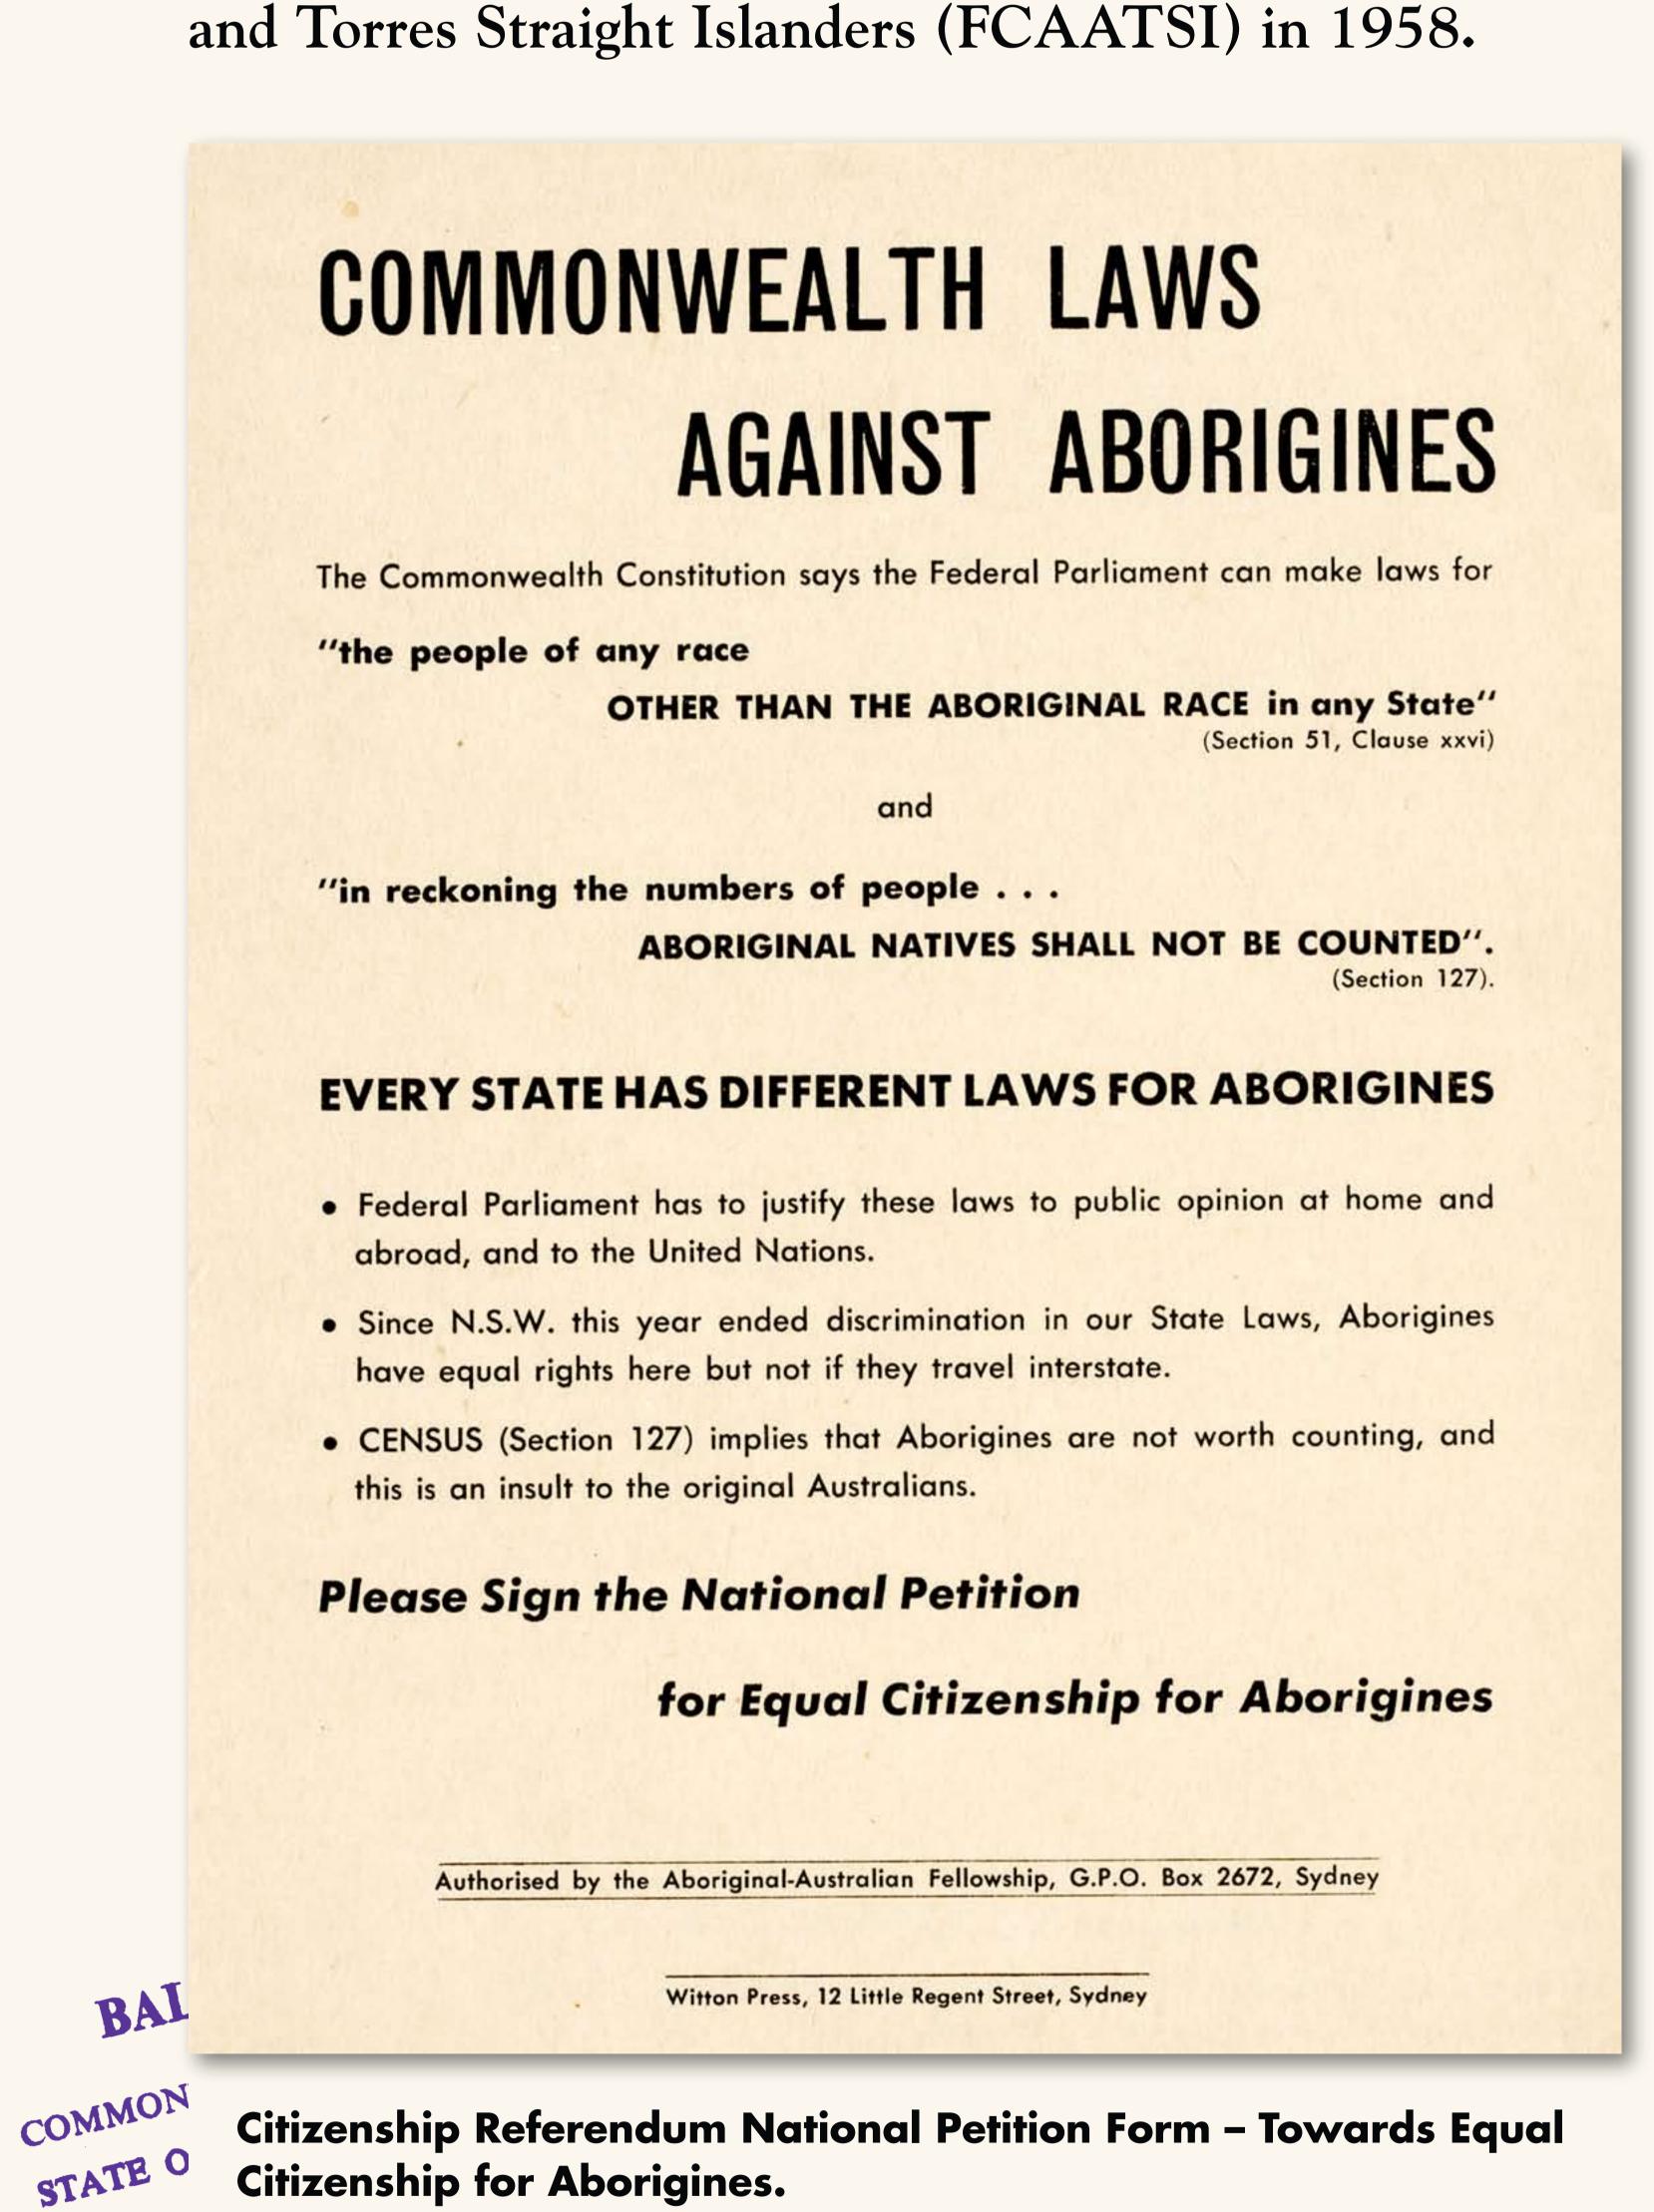

TOWARDS EQUAL

We asked that section 51 be submitted to a referendum to remove this limitation on Commonwealth action in the belief that all Australian laws ought to apply equally to all Australians and that no one should be excluded from Commonwealth benefits on account of race.

The case for changing section 51 Federal Council for the Advancement of Aborigines and Torres Strait Islanders March 1967.

Since the Day of Mourning campaign in 1938 to recognise the 150th anniversary of white invasion, Aboriginal people had been agitating for political and social recognition with little success. In April 1957 a group in Sydney began a campaign to petition the Commonwealth to change the constitution. The campaign achieved national status with the formation of the Federal Council for the Advancement of Aborigines

Citizenship Referendum National Petition Form – Towards Equal Citizenship for Aborigines.

Reproduced courtesy of National Library of Australia and Dr Barry Christophers for the al An Act to alter the Constitution so that the Number ission to

Members of the House of Representatives may be reased without necessarily increasing the Number of DIRECTIONS. Mark your vote on this ballot-paper as

If you APPROVE the proposed law, write the word YES

If you DO NOT APPROVE the proposed law, write the word NC

DO POU APPROVE the proposed law for the alteration of

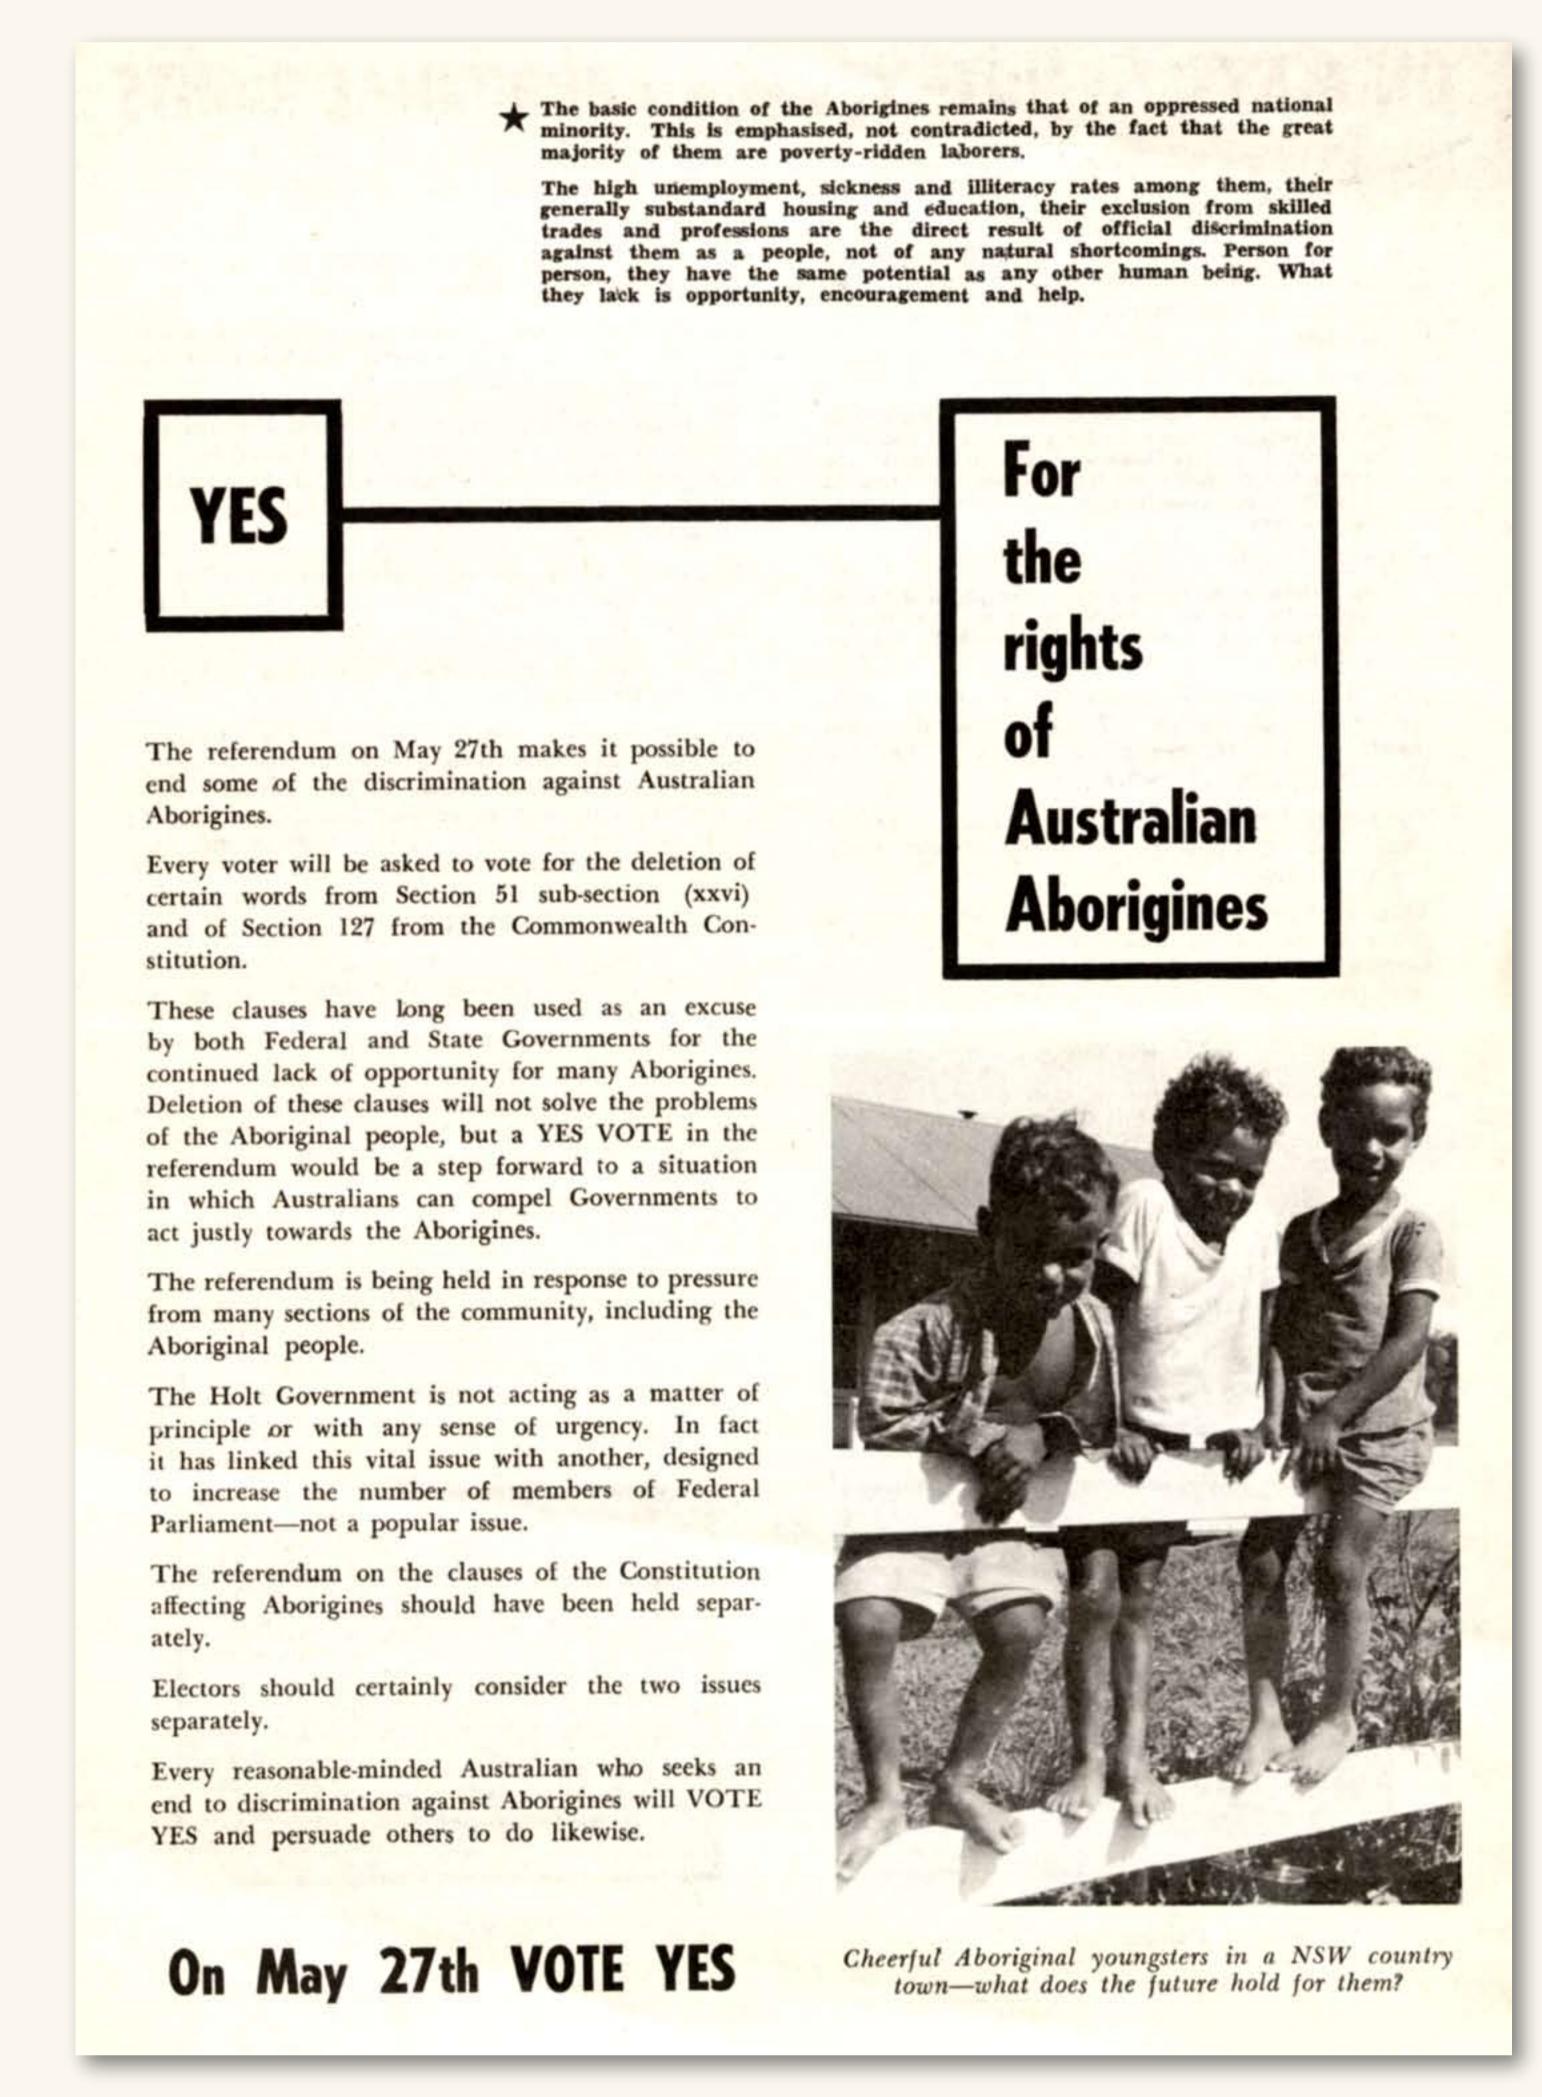

to lter the Constitution so that the

the Number of Senators"?

to the People of the Aborigin

the proposed

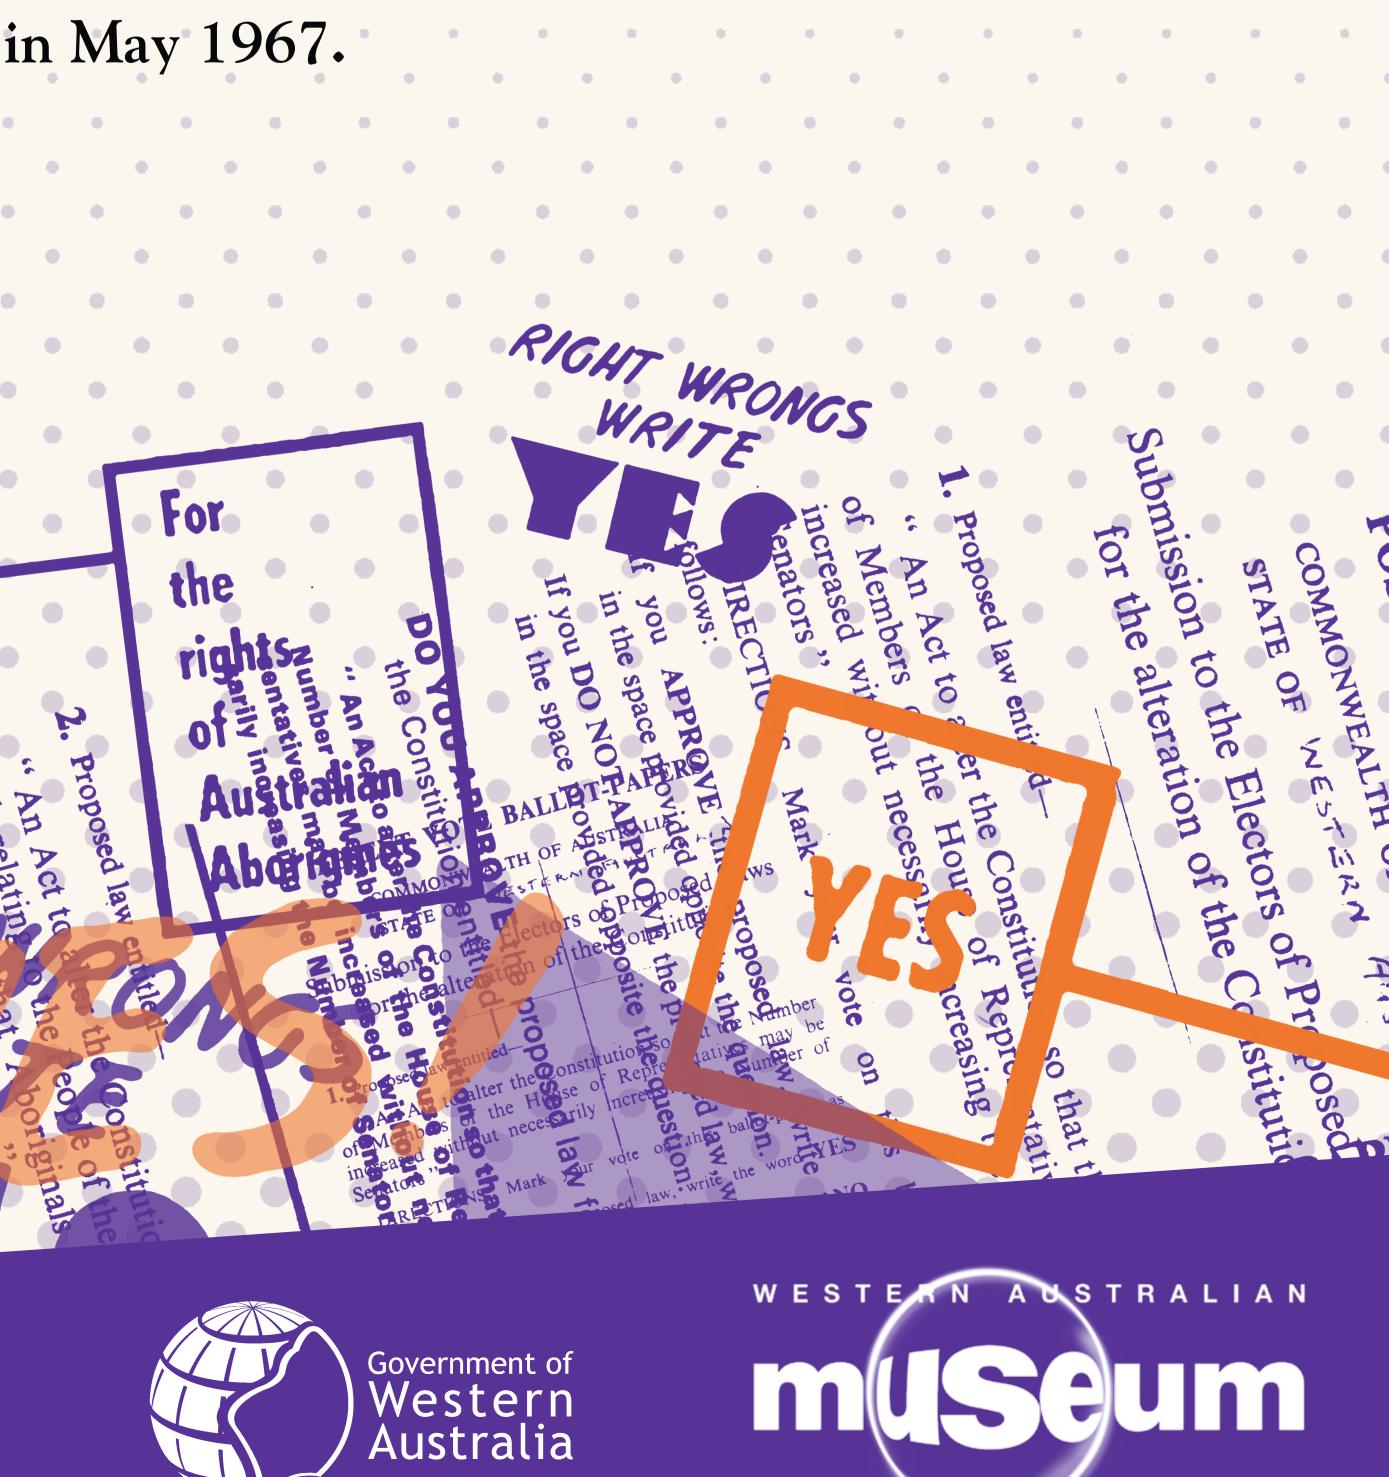

in the space provided opposite the question.

On May 27 Vote Yes for Aboriginal Rights, May 1967 Communist Party pamphlet

Reproduced courtesy of National Library of Australia and Dr Barry Christophers.

It took ten years to gather over 1 million signatures on petitions that gave Parliament a basis to support holding the referendum. The petitions were first presented to Parliament in 1963 without success. In 1965 a group of activists from Sydney University, led by Charles Perkins, organized a Freedom Ride around the northern towns of NSW drawing attention to segregation and active discrimination against Aboriginal people. The media made the Ride front page news, shocking White Australia with the conditions in towns like Walgett, Moree, Lismore and Kempsey. The publicity and growing awareness in the wider community of the conditions and inequalities that faced Aboriginal people finally persuaded the majority of Australians to vote for constitutional change in May 1967.

THE YES CASE.

If Australia fails to write Yes to the proposal on aborigines, the rest of the world will believe that we have neither comprehension nor compassion.

Television broadcast by Hon Gough Whitlam QC, Leader of the Opposition, 16 May 1967

Do you approve the proposed law for the alteration of the Constitution entitled 'An Act to alter the Constitution so as to omit certain words relating to the people of the Aboriginal race in any state so that Aboriginals are to be counted in reckoning the population?

SECTION 51, PART (XXV1):

The Parliament shall, subject to this Constitution, have power to make laws for the peace, order, and good government of the Commonwealth with respect to:-

The people of any race, other than the aboriginal race in any state, for whom it is deemed necessary to make special laws

SECTION 127:

In reckoning the numbers of the people of the Commonwealth, or of a State or other part of the Commonwealth, aboriginal natives should not be counted.

The bold text represents the sections of the Constitution that the Referendum would remove if passed.

FCAATSI committees in each state enlisted strong support from Church and community groups to educate the wider community on the need for a strong "Yes" vote. The Aboriginal Advancement Council and Aboriginal Rights Council were the leading Western Australian groups led by people including E.C. Gare, George Abdullah, Jack Davies and Charles Pell. Many newspapers ran positive editorials and news stories promoting the arguments supporting the 'Yes' vote.

The word 'yes' had to be written on the Referendum Ballot papers. All advertising strongly featured this as officials were concerned that people may simply tick or cross the boxes by mistake. Despite an active campaign by all political parties and FCAATSI, many people did not understand what they were voting for. Even today, many people still believe the Referendum was to give Aboriginal people the vote, even though they had been able to vote in Federal elections since 1962.

The Geraldton Guardian

Tuesday, May 23, 1967

"YES, PLEASE"

While there undoubtedly are mixed feelings regarding the section in next Saturday's referendum regarding the dissolution of the link between the numbers of the House of Representatives and of the Senate, most people should have little hesitation in voting "Yes" on the section relating to aboriginals.

The present constitutional position regarding this sector of the Australian population is obsolete and unjustifiable in this present age. Conditions have changed completely in the 67 years since the Constitution came into force.

The proposals covered by the referendum are twofold. Each is important if our aboriginals are to receive justice.

The first proposal is to amend Section 51 (xxvi) to give the Federal Parliament the right to make laws "for the peace, order and good government of the Commonwealth with respect to the people of any race . . . in any State for whom it is deemed necessary to make special laws."

At present the Commonwealth can do so for any race but the aboriginals. This is obviously wrong and the situation is one which is discriminatory.

On the positive side the proposal will enable the Commonwealth to make special laws for the people of the aboriginal race, wherever they live, if it be thought necessary.

As things are there is considerable doubt as to what the Commonwealth can do to help the aboriginals. There are many problems in which Commonwealth aid would be invaluable — in fact, in which it is urgently needed.

Three such aspects come to mind immediately those of education, housing and health. The financial burden imposed upon States in these matters can be shared by the Commonwealth if this section of the referendum is approved.

The proposal does not include any danger that the States would lose their existing powers automatically. State rights will continue but the Commonwealth will have additional powers granted to give additional relief.

What is intended is that the Federal Parliament will be able to make laws regarding aboriginals as it can on other atters on which the States also have power to legislate.

The Commonwealth has stated that its object is to co-operate with the States to ensure that, acting together, the best interests of the aboriginals may be advanced.

The other proposal is to delete Section 127, which states that aboriginals shall not be counted in a census or other reckoning of the numbers of people in Commonwealth or a State.

When this was included in the Constitution in 1900 the difficulties in counting aboriginals were extremely great. Most of that race in those days were nomadic and widely dispersed while communications with the inland were poor and practically non-existent.

The position has changed since then. Now there should be no real difficulty in conducting a

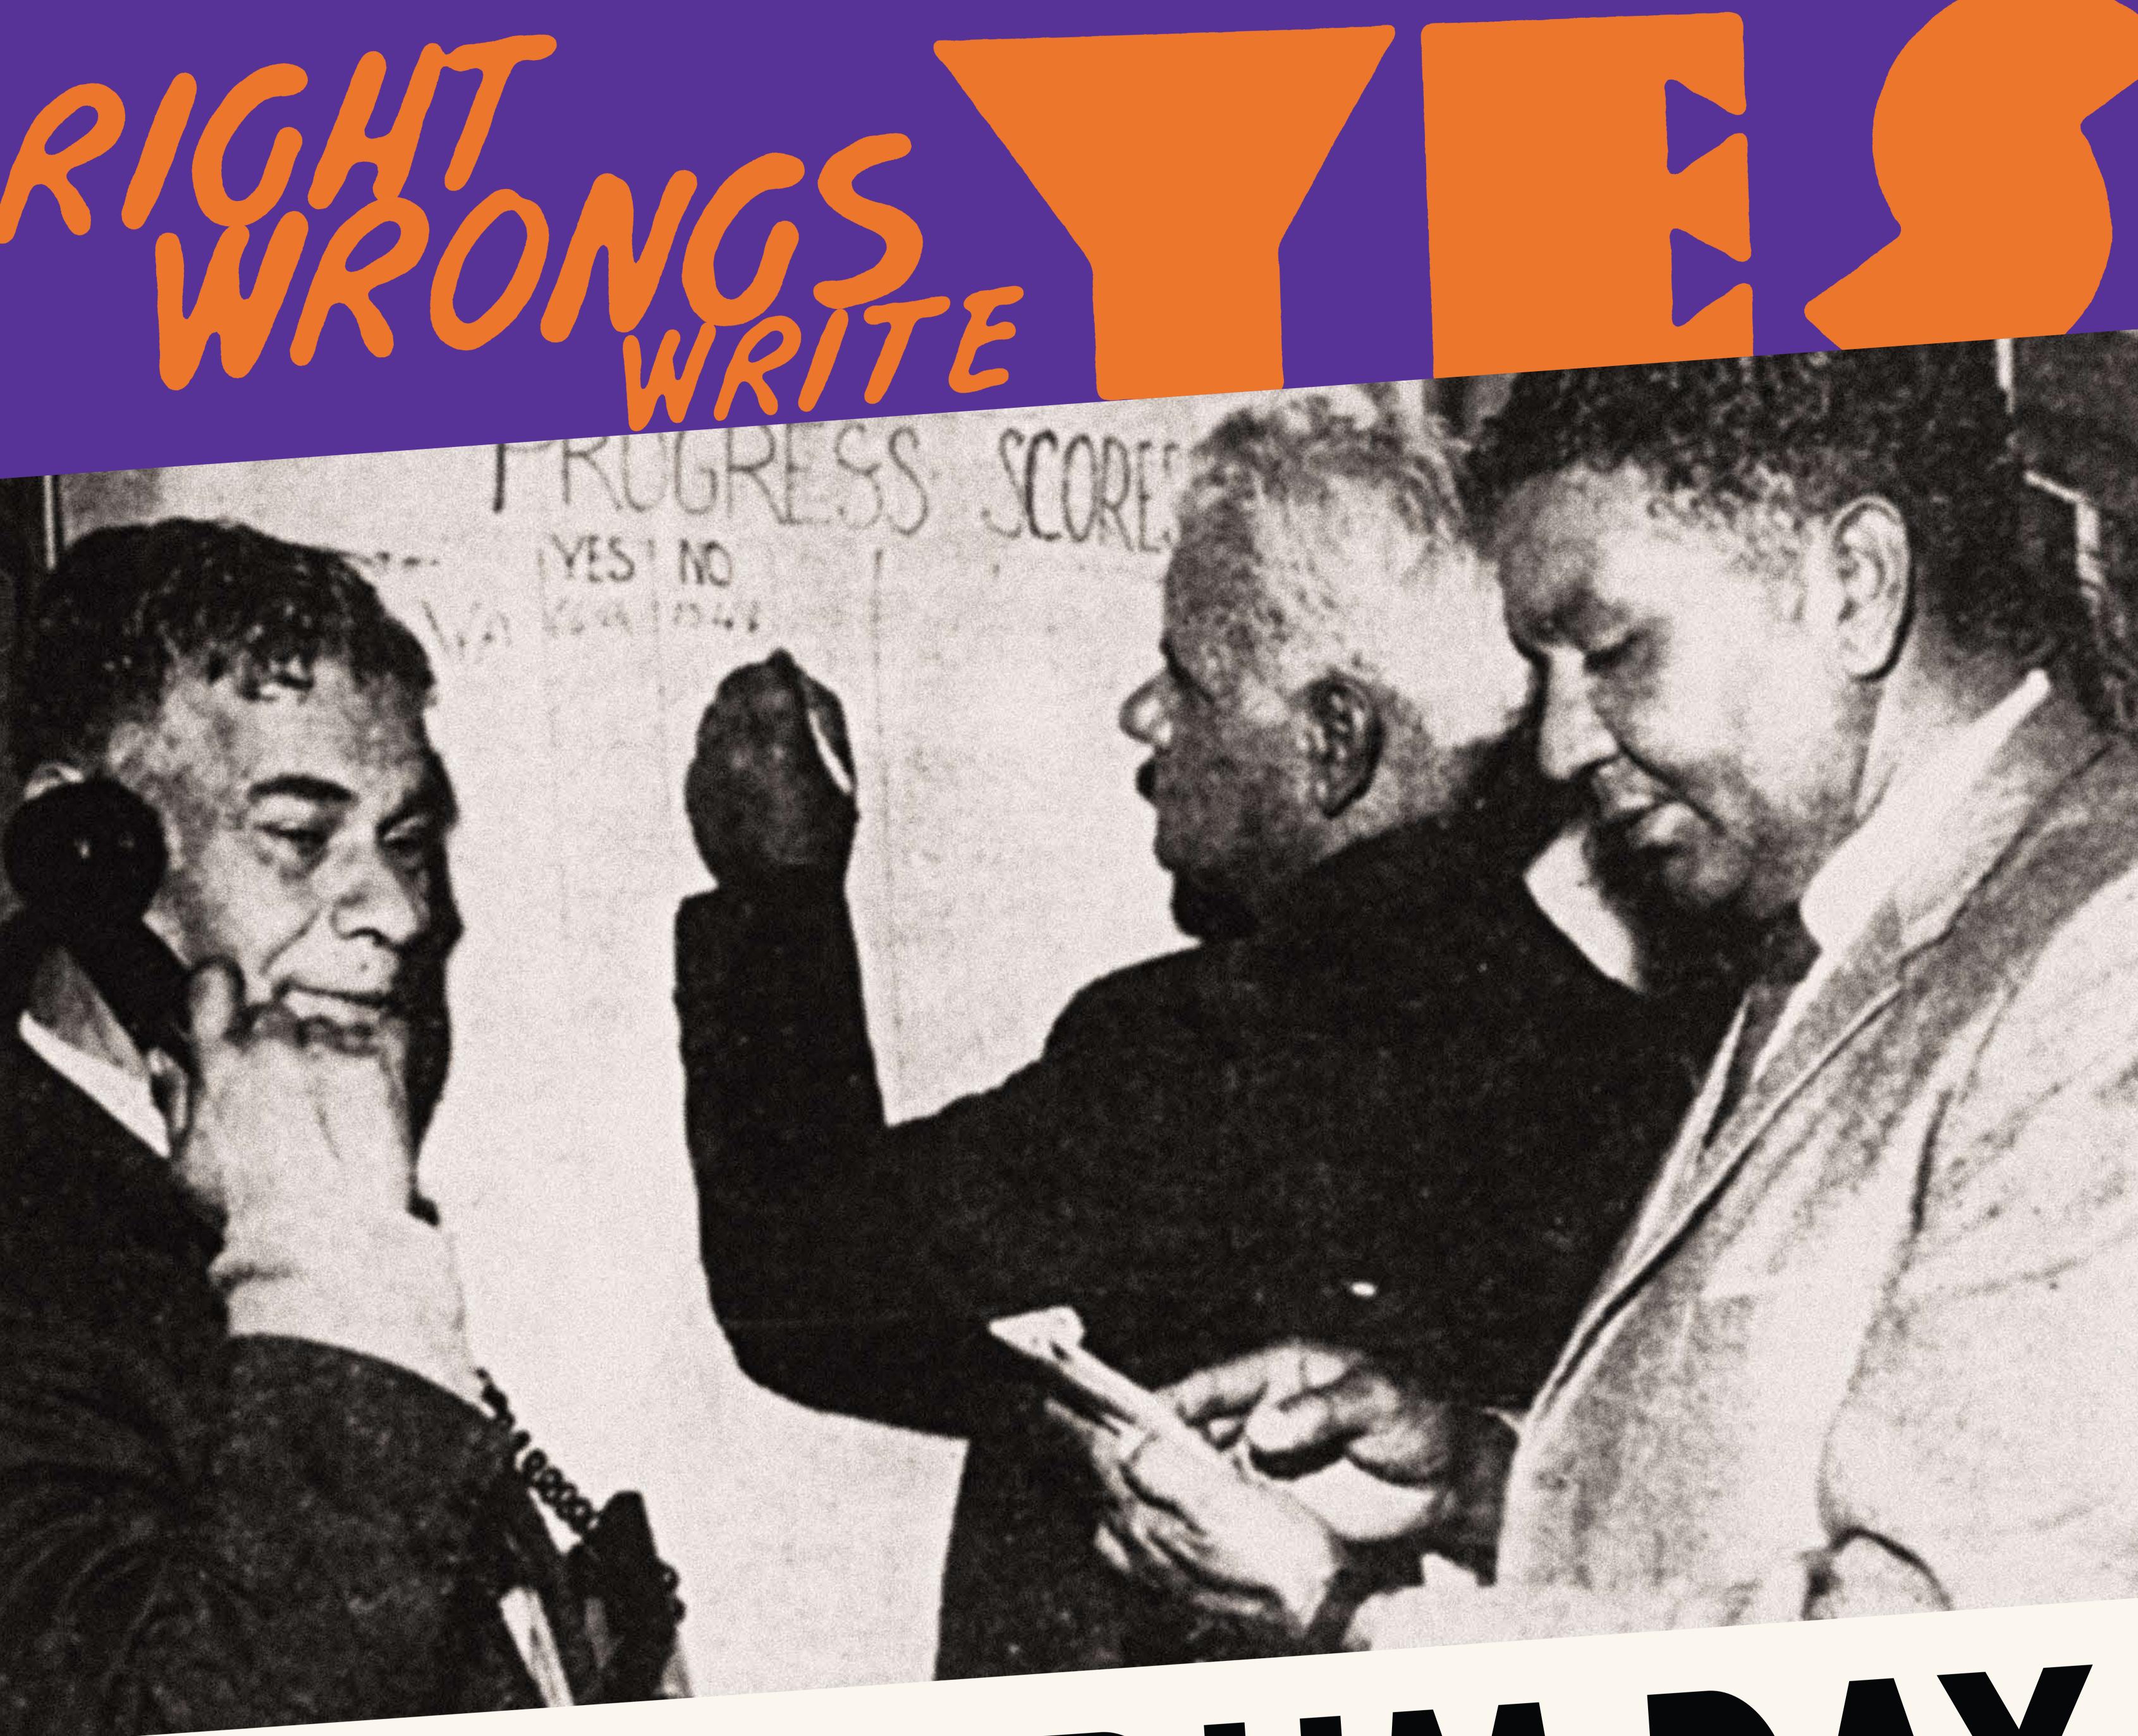

The absurdity of the position becomes apparent when it is realised that for some years now aboriginals have been entitled to enrol for and vote at Federal elections. There is nothing to stop them being elected to Parliament — yet they cannot be counted for electoral purposes.

Justice, commonsense and international repute demand a "Yes" vote on this portion of the referendum. The main danger is that those wishing to vote "No" on the first section will automatically do so on the second.

The Geraldton Guardian, 23 May 1967

Courtesy of The Geraldton Guardian

REFERENDUM DAY

I hope the Commonwealth sees it as meaning that the people of W.A. and of Australia want more done for Aborigines.

E.C.Gare, President Aboriginal Advancement Council The West Australian, 29 May 1967

The grant of power to the Commonwealth in relation to Aborigines which follows from the vote will enable it to play a useful part in ensuring justice and social acceptance for people of the Aboriginal race.

Hon. Harold Holt, Prime Minister of Australia

The West Australian, 29 May 1967

Australians voted overwhelmingly 'Yes' to remove the discriminatory words and limitations to Aboriginal people in the Constitution. Despite this enthusiasm for change from across the Australian community, the every day lives of Aboriginal people remained the same. The referendum did not grant any extra legal or political rights, did not cover land rights, it did not lessen discrimination nor were there any great improvements in health, housing or education services. In Western Australia, Aboriginal people still had to apply for citizenship to a magistrate under the Natives Citizenship Rights Act of 1944. The Commonwealth continued to leave the running of Aboriginal affairs largely to the States. It was almost ten years later before the power given to the Commonwealth by the 1967 referendum was actually used by the Whitlam Government to make laws for the benefit of Aboriginal people.

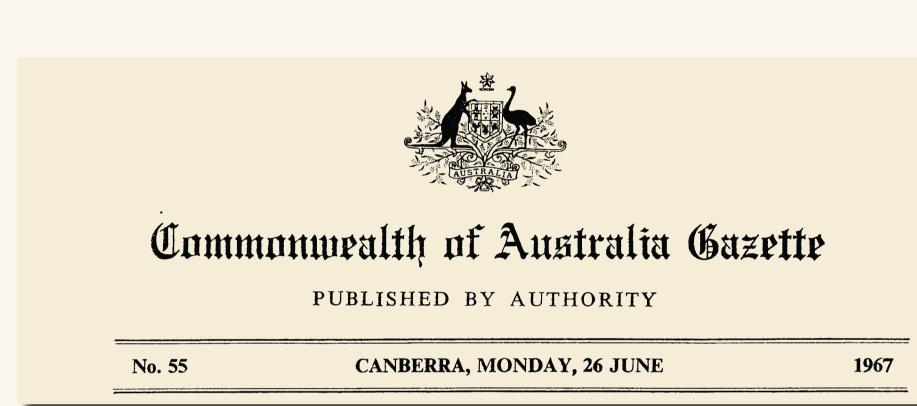

Top: The West Australian, May 29 1967, report on the Referendum results includes a photograph of George Abdullah, Jack Davies and Charles Pell recording the progress of the vote at the Aboriginal Centre in Beaufort Street, Perth.

Reproduced courtesy of The West Australian Newspapers Ltd.

ission

Member

creased,

Commonwealth of Australia
STATEMENT SHOWING RESULT OF REFERENDUM UPON PROPOSED LAW TO ALTER THE CONSTITUTION WITH

RESPECT TO ABORIGINALS WHEREAS in pursuance of the Writ issued by the Administrator of the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia on the twenty-eighth day of April, 1967 to me, a proposed law to alter the Constitution entitled "Constitution Alteration (Aboriginals) 1967" was, on the twenty-seventh day of May, 1967, submitted according to law in each State to the electors qualified to vote for the election of members of the House of Representatives: And whereas in pursuance of the Referendum (Constitution Alteration) Act 1906-1966 a statement of the voting on the submission (in the said Act referred to as the Referendum) has been indorsed on the said Writ: And whereas by the said Act it is enacted that the Chief Electoral Officer shall publish a copy of the said statement in the Gazette, and that the statement so published shall, subject to the said Act, be conclusive evidence of the result of the Referendum: Now therefore I do hereby certify that the statement hereunder set out is a true copy of the statement indorsed on the said Writ, and do publish the statement in the Gazette in pursuance of the said Act.

F. L. LEY

Chief Electoral Officer for the Commonwealth

STATEMENT INDORSED ON THE WRIT ABOVE REFERRED TO

I certify that in pursuance of the within Writ a proposed law to alter the provisions of the Constitution entitled "Constitution Alteration (Aboriginals) 1967", was submitted to the electors in each State of the Commonwealth on the twenty-seventh day of May, 1967, and that the result of the voting as regards each State and as regards the Commonwealth was as follows:

049,036 525,026 748,612 173,440 519,823	182,010 85,611 90,587 75,383 75,282	35,461 19,957 9,529 12,021 10,561
748,612 173,440 319,823	90,587 75,383	9,529 12,021
173,440 319,823	75,383	12,021
319,823	•	•
•	75,282	10.563
17 171		10,501
167,176	18,134	3,935
83,113	527,007	91,464
·		i
Г.	_	mm annicalth
	F	of June, 1967. F. L. LEY toral Officer for the Con

Above: Commonwealth of Australia gazette No 55, 26 June 1967 showing the final results of the Referendum.

EQUAL RIGHTS

My pride stopped me from applying for citizenship when I became 21. I had already had two children, the Commissioner of Native Welfare was their guardian.

Pat Kopusar, Yes Aborigines do count! 1967-1992, Wangka Maya, Pilbara Aboriginal Language Centre, May 1992

Under some state legislation, Aboriginal people could not travel from place to place, control their own money, drink alcohol or marry without permission.

In Western Australia, until 1971, the Native (Citizenship Rights) Act 1944, stated that Aboriginal people had to apply for citizenship. They had to prove that they had severed all ties with extended family and friends, were free from disease, could speak English, had been 'civilised' in behavior for two years, could manage their affairs and were industrious in their habits.

Citizenship did not automatically extend to their children who had to apply under the same rules for citizenship once they reached adulthood. A person could have their citizenship revoked if they were seen to have reject 'civilised' life, been convicted twice of any felony, found drunk or had contracted leprosy, syphilis, granuloma or yaws. Anyone could make a complaint to a magistrate to revoke someone's citizenship. Many people referred to these Citizenship Certificates as dog tags or dog licenses.

Many Aboriginal people in Western Australia had thought the 1967 Referendum would automatically repeal this Act given the nature of the Referendum questions.

Natives (Citizenship Rights). [1944. NATIVES (CITIZENSHIP RIGHTS). 8° and 9° GEO. VI., No. XXIII. No. 23 of 1944. AN ACT to provide for the acquisition of full rights of citizenship by aborigine natives. [Assented to 23rd December, 1944.] BE it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of Western Australia, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:— 1. This Act may be cited as the Natives (Citizenship Rights) Act, 1944. 2. This Act shall be read and construed subject to the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act, and so as not to exceed the legislative power of the State to the intent that where any provision of this Act would but for this section be in excess of that power it shall nevertheless be a valid enactment to the extent to which it is not in excess of that power. "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of Native Affairs appointed under the Native Administration Act, 1905-1941.

Natives Citizen Rights Act, 1944

Natives (Citizenship Rights). "Holder" means the person to whom a Certificate of Citizenship has been granted under this 4. (1) Any adult person who is a native within the Adult natives meaning of the Native Administration Act, 1905-1941, may make application for a Certificate of Citizenship to a resident or stipendiary magistrate or Government Certificate of Citizenship. Resident in the magisterial district in which he resides. (2) Such application shall be in the prescribed form supported by a statutory declaration signed by the applicant to the effect that he wishes to become a citizen of the State, that for the two years prior to the date of the application he has dissolved tribal and native association except with respect to lineal descendants or native relations of the first degree, and— (a) that he has served in the Naval, Military or Air Force of the Commonwealth and has received or is entitled to receive an honourable discharge; or (b) that he is otherwise a fit and proper person to obtain a Certificate of Citizenship. (3) Every application shall be accompanied by two recent written references from reputable citizens certifying as to the good character and industrious habits of the applicant. 5. (1) Before granting any application brought Evidence to under the provisions of the preceding section, the magistrate shall be satisfied that— (a) for the two years immediately prior the applicant has adopted the manner and habits of civilised life: (b) the full rights of citizenship are desirable for and likely to be conducive to the welfare of (c) the applicant is able to speak and understand the English language; (d) the applicant is not suffering from active leprosy, syphilis, granuloma or yaws;

(e) the applicant is of industrious habits and is of good behaviour and reputation;

TIMELINE 1968-1990

Federal Pastoral Industry Award, theoretically allows for equal wages for equal work.

Commonwealth Office of Aboriginal Affairs is established within Prime Minister Holt's Department.

Aboriginal flag is first flown. 5

Commonwealth Office of Aboriginal Affairs is upgraded to a Department of Aboriginal Affairs.

Whitlam Federal Labor government adopts self-determination as the official government policy in Indigenous Affairs.

The Aboriginal Affairs Planning Authority Act provides for the establishment of an Aboriginal Affairs Planning Authority, a Commissioner for Aboriginal Planning and an Aboriginal Affairs Advisory Council to provide consultative and other services and for the economic, social and cultural advancement of persons of Aboriginal descent in Western Australia. The Native Welfare Act 1963 is repealed.

The Western Australian Aboriginal Heritage Act is declared with the aim of protecting places and objects of significance to Aboriginal people.

Neville Bonner is elected to Senate for Queensland, becoming the first indigenous person to be elected to any Australian parliament.

Aboriginal tent embassy is pitched outside Parliament House, Canberra.

Commonwealth Racial Discrimination Act guarantees

the right of every Australian, regardless of race, to equal treatment before the law.

Western Australian Aboriginal Affairs Planning Authority (AAPA) Act is amended and a merger takes place between the Authority and the Federal Department of Aboriginal Affairs (DAA). The Commonwealth is responsible for the administration of the AAPA Act.

A Royal Commission headed by L.C. Furnell Q.C. inquires into all matters affecting the well-being of Aboriginal people in Western Australia.

First national elections for Indigenous people, to elect 41 members of the National Aboriginal Consultative Committee (NACC). More than 27,000 Aboriginal people vote.

National Aboriginal Conference (NAC) replaces the NACC and provides a forum for the expression of Aboriginal views.

> 65 Kimberley Land Council is established.

Western Australian Aboriginal Communities Act is proclaimed, allowing certain Aboriginal communities to manage and control community affairs.

Ernie Bridge (ALP, MLA Kimberley) becomes the first Aboriginal member of the Western Australian Parliament.

WA Government and CSR support Amax Mining Corporation who enter Noonkanbah community and drill into Ngarranggari sacred site.

The National Aboriginal Conference is disbanded.

A separate Aboriginal Affairs portfolio is created in Western Australia and the Hon Ernie Bridge, MLA, appointed to Cabinet as Minister for Aboriginal Affairs.

The AAPA becomes independent of the Commonwealth Department of Aboriginal Affairs.

Enrolment and voting in Commonwealth elections made compulsory for Indigenous people.

Aboriginal Land Inquiry, headed by Paul Seaman, Q.C. is established to make recommendations to the Government 'for a scheme of legislation for land related measures for the benefit of Aboriginal people' in Western Australia. Report presented in 1984.

The Royal Commission into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody is established by the Commonwealth, State and Territory Governments to investigate the deaths of ninety-nine Aboriginal persons in police and prison custody.

The State Ministers for Aboriginal Affairs, Police and Corrective services establish an Interim Inquiry into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody in Western Australia.

Commonwealth Government launches the Aboriginal Employment Development Policy to assist Aboriginal people achieve equity with other Australians in terms of employment and economic status.

The Ministers for Aboriginal Affairs and Health co-chair the first national meeting of a joint Ministerial Forum on Aboriginal Health.

The National Aboriginal Health Strategy is presented to the Joint Ministerial Forum. The third National Health Survey (conducted by the Royal Commission appoints Patrick Dodson as

Commissioner for Western Australia to consider

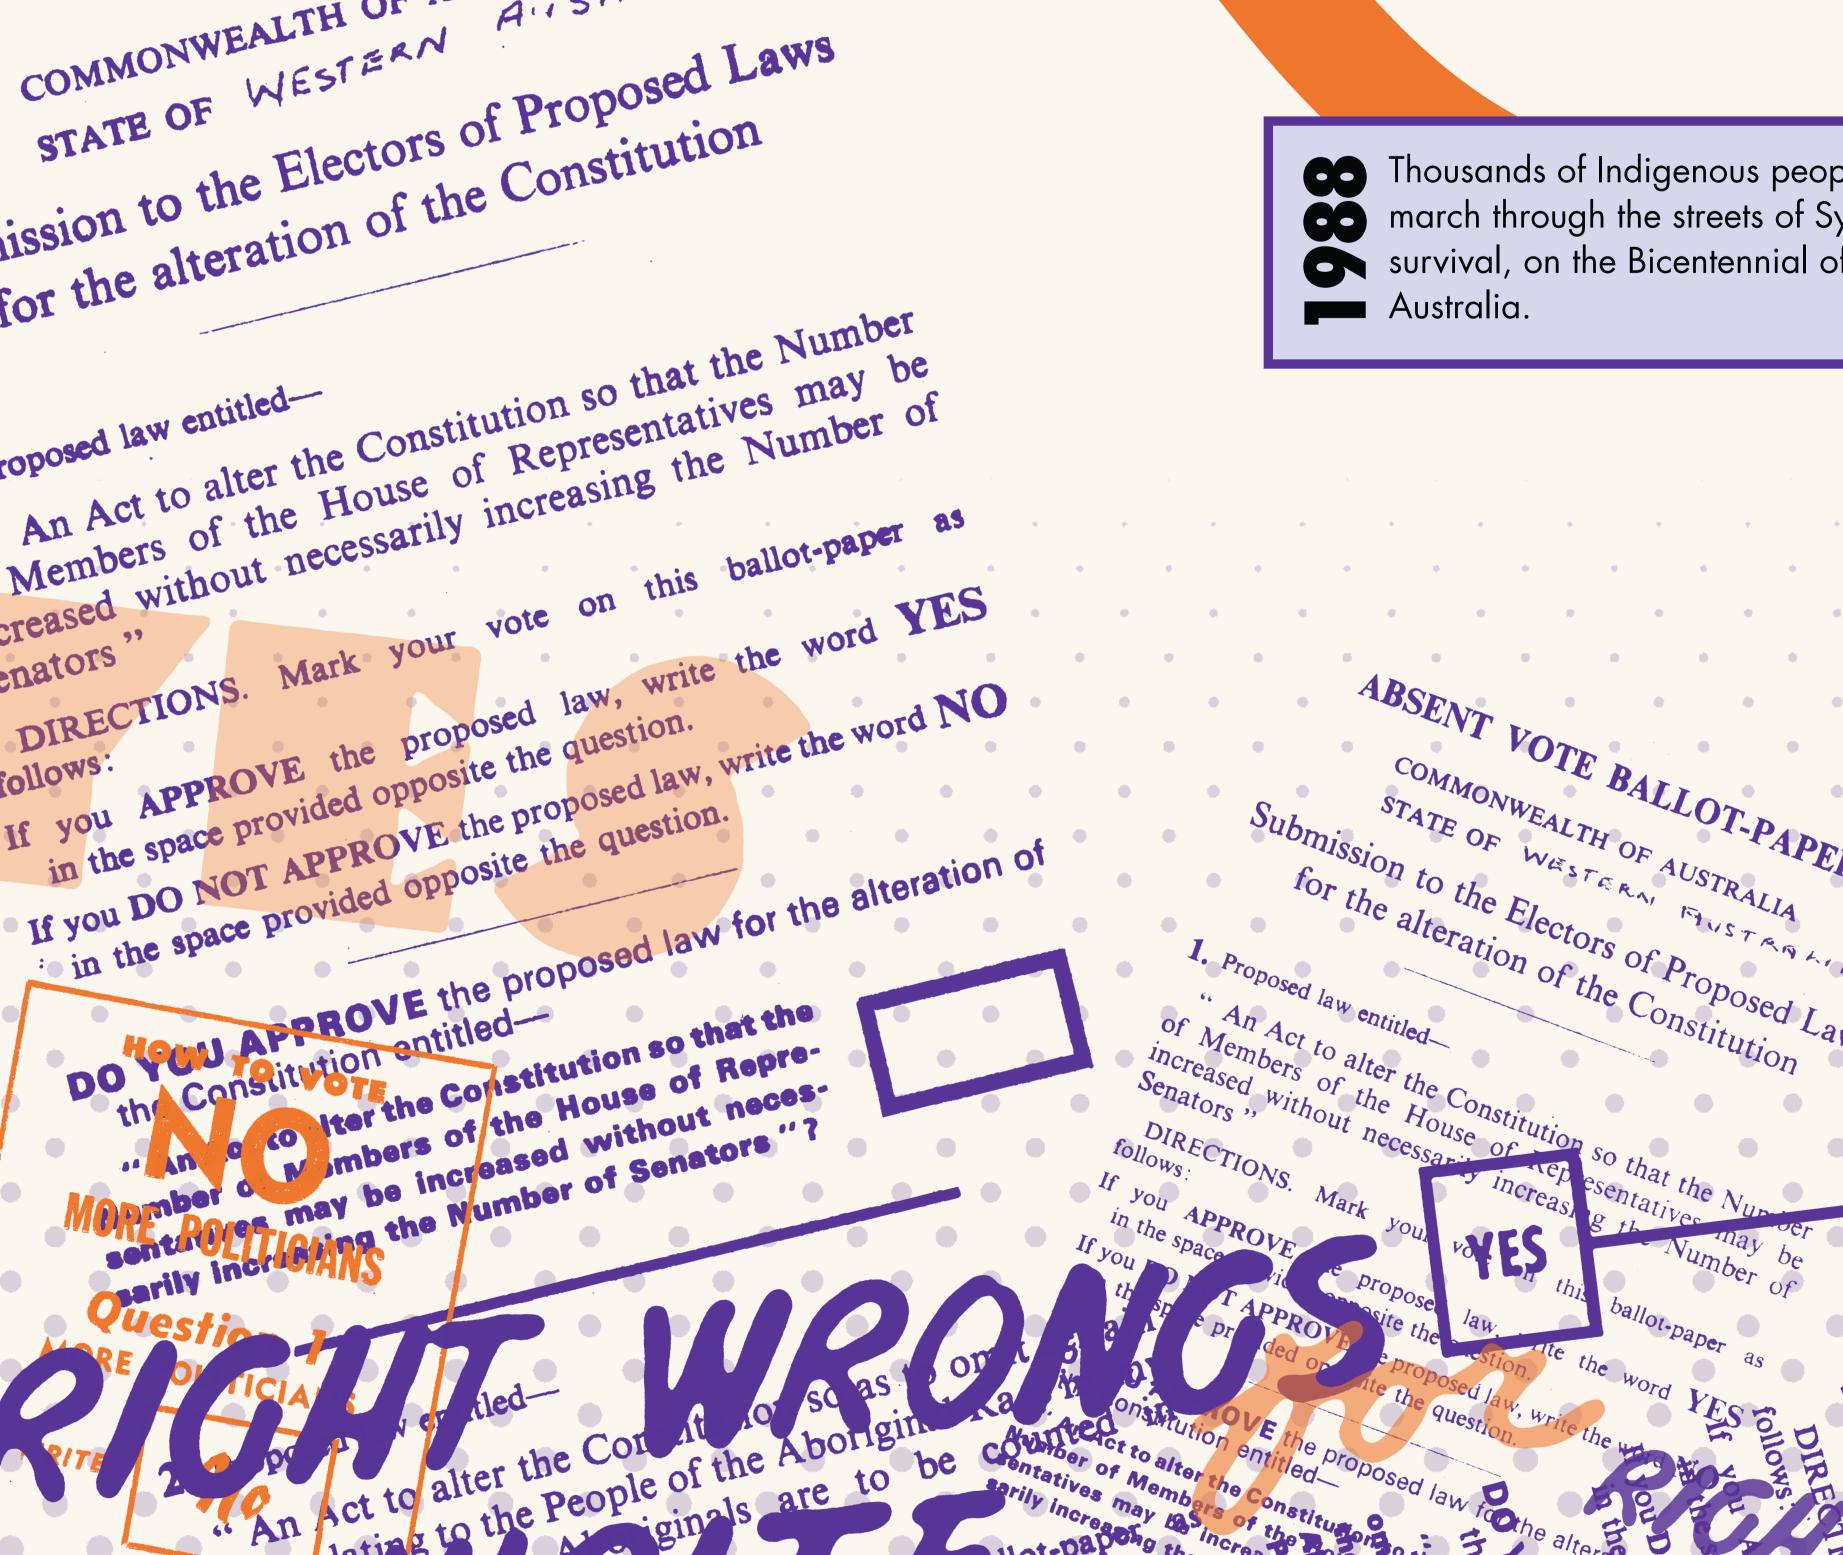

'underlying issues' of Aboriginal deaths in custody.

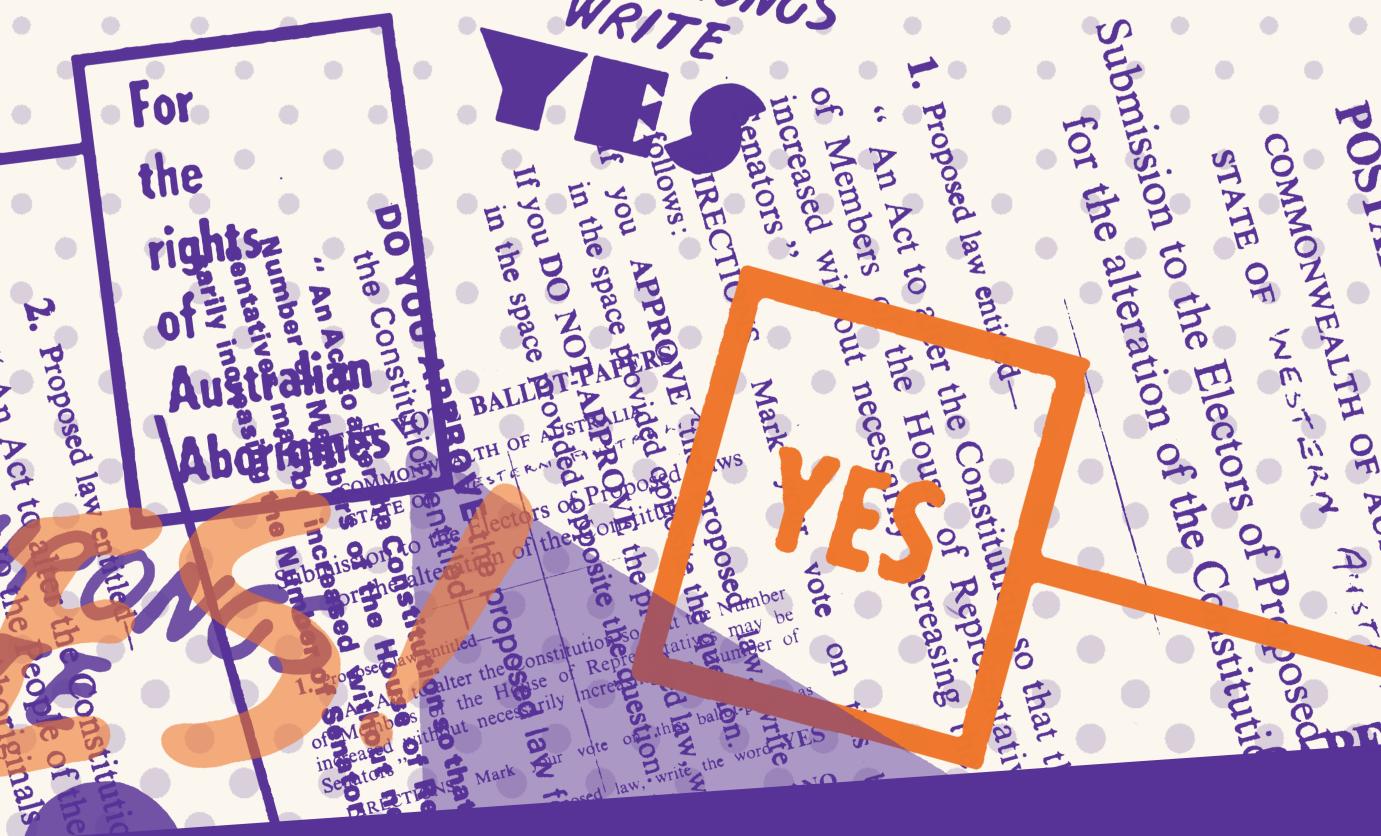

ABS) provides, for the first time, for the identification of Indigenous people.

BALLOT-PAPER COMMONWEALTH OF AU STATE OF WESTERN ALISTI

Thousands of Indigenous people and supporters march through the streets of Sydney to celebrate survival, on the Bicentennial of British invasion of Australia.

The Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission (ATSIC) is established, replacing the DAA and the Aboriginal Development Commission.

TIMELINE 1991-2007

The City of Albany Aboriginal Accord was launched by Indigenous Affairs Minister Alan Carpenter. This was a first of its kind between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Communities.

The Indigenous Women's Congress was formed to facilitate a greater participation of Indigenous women in government decision making.

The Premier of Western Australia, Dr Geoff Gallop, signs an agreement entitled Statement of Commitment to a New and Just Relationship between the Government of Western Australia and Aboriginal Western Australians.

Western Australian Department of Indigenous Affairs is established replacing Aboriginal Affairs Department.

For the first time, Aboriginal people take part in the opening of the Western Australian Parliament on 1 May.

The Wand Report reviewing the Native Title claim process in Western Australia is released.

Dedication of Australia's first State war memorial for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in Kings Park.

Carol Martin (Labor) wins the Legislative Assembly seat of Kimberley and becomes the first Aboriginal woman to be elected to a State Parliament.

The Yungngora people are presented with the deeds to the 260 ha of freehold land. The Noonkanbah pastoral lease is the first freehold property in the West Kimberley to be handed over under the State Government's Land transfer program.

A consent determination finds that Native Title exists for parts of the area claimed by the Western Australian Spinifex People.

High Court declares Western Australia's Land (Titles and Traditional Usage) Act 1993 to be inconsistent with the Racial Discrimination Act 1975 (Cth) and therefore invalid under the Constitution. Land (Titles and Traditional Usage) Act 1993 repealed.

The Western Australian Commission of Elders is established with representatives drawn from each of the seven regions.

Regional Aboriginal Justice Councils established in the Pilbara, the Metropolitan region, the Goldfields and the Murchison/Gascoyne.

National Inquiry launched by the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission (HREOC) to investigate the separation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children from their families.

The final Report of The Royal Commission into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody was tabled in State and Federal Parliaments. The Royal Commission made 339 recommendations.

A special Royal Commission Cabinet Sub-Committee was announced by the Western Australian State Government.

In August 1991, the Commonwealth Council for Aboriginal Reconciliation Act establishes a Council of 25 members to promote a process of reconciliation between Aborigines and Torres Strait Islanders and the wider Australian community.

ission to the Electors of Proposed Laws or the alteration of the Constitution

An Act to alter the Constitution so that the Number

Members of the House of Representatives may be

Members of the House of Representatives of the Number o reased without necessarily increasing the Number of DIRECTIONS. Mark your vote on this ballot-paper as If you APPROVE the proposed law, write the word YEL

If you DO NOT APPROVE the proposed law, write the word N in the space provided opposite the question. DO POU APPROVE the proposed law for the alteration of

for the alteration of the Constitution Co liter the Constitution so that the 7 the Number of Senators "?

High Court hands down its decision in the Mabo v. Queensland No. 2 case, rejecting the doctrine that Australia was 'terra nullius' (land belonging to no-one) at the time of settlement and holding that the common law of Australia recognises a form of traditional native title.

The Western Australian State Government indicates its full, qualified or in principle support for all 339 recommendations of the Report of the Royal Commission into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody.

At the Australian launch of the International Year for the World's Indigenous People at Redfern Park in NSW Labor Prime Minister Paul Keating acknowledged colonial culpability: We took the traditional lands and smashed the traditional way of life. We brought the disasters. The alcohol. We committed the murders. We took the children from their mothers. We practised discrimination and exclusion.

Position of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Social Justice Commissioner was created by Federal Parliament.

The Single Noongar Native Title application, covering the whole of the south-west of Western Australia is upheld. The claim Judgement states that the evidence indicated that the Noongar people have continued, since sovereignty, to occupy, use and enjoy the claim area to which they had legal access. The State and Commonwealth have appealed some aspects of the decision.

A consent determination finds that Native Title exists for the entire determination area for the Yungngora People of Noonkanbah.

Dissolution of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission (ATSIC) and Regional Councils.

The Miriuwung Gajerrong No. 1 (also known as Ward) Native Title claim is settled.

State Government signs a $38 million Indigenous Land Use Agreement between the Eastern Guruma people, Hamersley Iron Pty Ltd and Rio Tinto Pty Ltd. The 50-year agreement covers an area of 6,774 square kilometres of land south east of Karratha, and allows for exploration, mining and infrastructure development to take place without triggering the Native Title Act's future act regime.

Wik High Court judgment

extinguish native title.

lease does not necessarily

Report of the Task Force on Report') is presented to the

Aboriginal Social Justice

Western Australian Aboriginal

Affairs Department is created.

(known as the 'Daub

Government.

states that a pastoral

Prime Minister John Howard passes a formal motion of reconciliation.

report.

Sorry Day is held one year after the tabling in Parliament of the HREOC

HREOC Inquiry reports in Bringing Them Home: a guide to the findings and recommendations of the National Inquiry into the separation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children from their families. The Premier on behalf of the State and Parliament formally offers an apology to Aboriginal people affected by past Government policies and practices for the removal of Aboriginal children from their families and communities.

Release of Western Australian government's Aboriginal Plan providing a clear statement of State Government programs in Aboriginal affairs.

Federal Parliament passes the Native Title Act, 1993 as part of a response to the High Court's Mabo decision. The legislation establishes the National Native Title Tribunal and governs how native title is dealt with across Australia. Western Australian Government challenges the constitutional validity of the legislation.

The Western Australian Land (Titles and Traditional Usage) Act replaces Aboriginal common law rights and entitlements with rights of 'traditional usage' of Crown land. High Court challenge by the Wororra People.

Government of Western Australia

WESTERN AUSTRALIAN