

Warrawee, Grange

1950 – 1975

Details

Warrawee at Grange was purchased in 1950 by the Australian Inland Mission, AIM, as a location for children's camps. In 1953 it also began operating as a Hostel for inland children studying in Adelaide. From 1957 AIM's Far North Children's Health Scheme accommodated children between 5 and 15, who were in Adelaide for treatment, in a new wing at Warrawee. Warrawee closed in 1975.

Warrawee, an Aboriginal word meaning 'camp here' or 'rest here', was named by the Goodwin family who previously owned the property. They named it after a small coastal steamer on which they had met. In 1931 the Reverend FH Patterson, a Presbyterian minister and later Padre of the Southern Patrol of the Australian Inland Mission [AIM], decided that it would be beneficial for inland children, particularly Aboriginal children, to visit the seaside for a holiday. A committee was formed to plan how this could be achieved.

The first camp was held at St Peter's Anglican Church Hall at Glenelg in 1933. Twenty five children came by train to Adelaide from as far north as Alice Springs. They spent three busy weeks in the city before returning home. The second camp was held at the Junior Red Cross Home at Henley Beach. The third and successive camps were held at Kapara Convalescent Home at Glenelg. During World War II further camps were put on hold. One was held in 1949, but an epidemic of poliomyelitis caused the next annual camp to be cancelled.

Finding accommodation for the campers had always been a problem. In April 1950 the Reverend John Flynn and Mr Errol F Monk, secretary of the camp committee, walked along the beachfront from Northcote Home to Grange looking for a suitable site. They spotted Warrawee which at that time was a very old residence of eight main rooms. AIM purchased the building and land in July 1950 and carried out extensive renovations. The first group of children arrived there for a Christmas camp in 1950. Other camps followed in 1951 and 1952. The home was officially opened in May 1952. The following year it also began operating as a Hostel for inland children coming to Adelaide to study.

In February 1957 the Far North Children's Health Scheme was formed. As it was part of AIM, it made Warrawee its base. This health scheme provided a service for outback children aged between 5 and 15 to come to Adelaide for specialist medical care. Parents paid the cost of treatment only if they could afford it. As a result of this scheme further land was purchased and a new wing added to accommodate a minimum of 20 children. The work of the health scheme replaced the children's camps as demand for the service increased. Most of the patients were young Aboriginal children and babies. In 1965 further additions were made to the home and numbers of staff increased to cater for the 30 children who could now be admitted.

Warrawee closed in 1975 as by that time the majority of children were being admitted directly to the Adelaide Children's Hospital. AIM sold the property.

Gallery

Australian Inland Mission Warrawee home for inland children, Adelaide, South Australia, ca. 1950

Inland children at Warrawee, Adelaide, Queensland

Description: The library catalogue includes the description: Warrawee, the building depicted, is located in the suburb of Grange, Adelaide, South Australia, and was purchased in 1950 as seaside accommodation for holidaying inland children, particularly Aboriginal children. From 1953 Warrawee also operated as a host.

Padre Vic Murrell with the A.I.M. flag displayed on a truck at Grange, South Australia

Description: The library catalogue includes the description: Warrawee, the building depicted, is located in the suburb of Grange, Adelaide, South Australia, and was purchased in 1950 as seaside accommodation for holidaying inland children, particularly Aboriginal children. From 1953 Warrawee also operated as a hostel for inland children studying in Adelaide. With the creation of the Far North Children's Health Scheme in 1957, Warrawee was extended and used for inland children, again mostly Aboriginal, who needed to come to Adelaide for specialist medical care.

More info

Related Entries

Run by

- Australian Inland Mission \(1912 - 1977\)
The SA Council of the Australian Inland Mission ran Warrawee.

Related Events

- Interstate movement of Northern Territory children \(1930s - 1970s\)

Related Organisations

- Junior Red Cross Home, Henley Beach \(1933 - 1946\)
Prior to the establishment of Warrawee the Australian Inland Mission conducted its summer holiday camps in a number of places. Its second camp in 1934 was held at the Junior Red Cross Home at Henley Beach
- Far North Children's Health Scheme \(1957 - 1975?\)
The Far North Children's Health Scheme brought inland children between the ages of 5 and 15 in need of treatment to Warrawee at Grange
Date: 1957 - 1975

Related Concepts

- Stolen Generations

Resources

- Scrimgeour, Robert J, Some Scots were here: A history of the Presbyterian Church In South Australia, 1839-1977, 1986
- Ferguson, E M, From the inland to Warrawee: a memory, a tribute, 1954

Records

For more information and to access your records, follow the links below:

Records

- [Records of the Uniting Church in Australia Frontier Services \[Australian Inland Mission\] \(1897 - 2011\)](#)
 - Records of the Aborigines' Office and Successor Agencies \(1866 - 2003\)
 - [Correspondence files, single number series with 'B' \[Child Endowment\] prefix \(1904 - 1974\)](#)
-

You can view this page online by visiting <https://www.findandconnect.gov.au/entity/warrawee-grange/>