

Southern Regional Resource Centre

1985 – 1995?

Other Names: • Southern Regional Resource Unit

Details

The Southern Regional Resource Centre opened in January 1985. Unlike the other resource centres, it did not run many activities. Instead, since the southern region already had a wide range of community groups, it linked welfare workers to those. The Centre closed in the 1990s.

In 1985, staff at the Centre found camping programs for 25 teenagers. At the same time, they discovered that there was not enough of this kind of activity for teenagers and developed a holiday and camping program for them.

By 1988, the Centre had initiated holiday programs, community-based camps, and a pilot accommodation program for troubled teenagers at Bevis Marks, as well as after school and weekend activities for children in family group homes. These included abseiling, climbing, making kayaks, kayaking, rafting, and athletics.

The Centre also provided support to Family Group Homes in the south and took part in monthly meetings with the carers.

More info

Related Entries

Ran

- Bevis Marks Independent Living Unit \(1988 - 1995?\)

Related Organisations

- Social Welfare Department, State of Tasmania \(1961 - 1983\)

The Social Welfare Department planned to open the Southern Resource Centre. This did not happen until 1985 when the Department had become the Department for Community Welfare.

You can view this page online by visiting <https://www.findandconnect.gov.au/entity/southern-regional-resource-centre/>