Other Names:

- Mt Yokine Education and Employment Hostel for Girls
- Bamburra House

Details

Bamburra Hostel opened in 1970 in Yokine. It was for Aboriginal teenage girls from remote areas attending high school and other education and training, although from 1994 (or possibly earlier) boys were also admitted. Bamburra was run by the Churches of Christ Federal Aborigines Mission Board from 1970 to 1984. Since then it has been run by the government departments responsible for child welfare. Bamburra remained open in 2013.

Bamburra Hostel was an Aboriginal Education and Employment Hostel. It opened in 1970 in Yokine for Aboriginal teenage girls from remote areas to stay during the school year so they could attend high school and other education and training. It was run by the Churches of Christ Federal Aborigines Mission Board from 1970 to 1986. In 1986, Bamburra was transferred to the Department for Community Welfare. Boys were admitted to Bamburra from 1994, possibly earlier.

Bamburra Hostel was run by the Churches of Christ from 1970 until 1986 under a formal agreement with the Department of Community Welfare, providing for girls attending secondary schooling and tertiary studies. Officials from the Churches of Christ Federal Aborigines Mission Board (CCFAMB) reported in 2004 that Bamburra accommodated female students from all parts of Western Australia, most of whom were in receipt of Commonwealth Secondary Grants. It was a policy of the CCFAMB that these young people kept up regular contact their families and returned home for school holidays.

In 1975, Bamburra Hostel was described as providing short term care for 'secondary school girls in a hostel-like setting', the average length of stay being nine months. The hostel at this time was reported as being a brick building that was 'integrated into the community'. Bamburra Hostel had a garden with a swimming pool, seven bedrooms (five doubles and two bedrooms which could sleep three or more girls), a lounge room, dining room, four bathrooms and toilets; and various amenities including television and piano. The young people walked or took a bus to their schools and home lunches were provided. Holiday activities included camping trips. (Department of Child Welfare Submission to the Committee of Enquiry into Residential Child Care, July 1976, reported in Signposts, 2004).

The CCFAMB ceased managing Bamburra Hostel from 1986 and the Department for Community Development assumed responsibility.

In October 1994, the Department for Community Development reported that there were 7 boys aged 15-18+ years resident at Bamburra House and the length of stay ranged from 1 week to more than 6 months. Bamburra remained open in 2013.
