Details

The Graceville Centre was the new name given in 1974 to what had been known since 1903 as Graceville. A Salvation Army Rescue Home, Graceville had replaced Cornelie Home at Highgate. By 1974 the Graceville Centre in Highgate was a complex of buildings accommodating: mothers and children temporarily; women aged 16-25 for alcohol rehabilitation; and, young and older women attending special schools and sheltered workshops. In 2013 the temporary accommodation services continued in an undisclosed location.

The Graceville Centre began its long history in 1898 as Cornelie Home; a Rescue Home for women and a maternity home for 'unmarried mothers'. After the maternity program was transferred to North Fremantle in 1903, Cornelie remained a Rescue Home with room for 21 women and its name changed to Graceville. On 22 March 1922, Graceville was registered as an 'Inebriates Home' but it seems that at some stage, young and older women with intellectual disabilities were also accommodated at Graceville. By 1972, Graceville reportedly was involved with the Slow Learning Children's Group workshops and 'special schools' and the Irrabeena assessment program.

In 1974 the property was further developed into the 'Graceville Centre' with additional units for women and their children needing temporary, emergency accommodation (Byanda) and lone women aged 16-25 years with a 'drink problem' (Nunyara). Byanda had previously (1920-1942) been the name of the younger children's building at the Salvation Army Girls' Home, Cottesloe. Byanda and Nunyara were built on the site previously occupied by the Graceville managers' and officers' quarters.

The original home was renamed Cornelie and was used to accommodate young and older women with intellectual disabilities who attended special schools and sheltered workshops. Many of these residents had links with Irrabeena. By 1984, this building was called 'Cornelie Hostel'. In March 1986, Cornelie was demolished and the female residents were transferred to a Baptistcare facility in Bassendean. Eleven new units were built on the site, opening on 13 December 1986 and named 'Cornelie Court'.

The Byanda and Nunyara buildings were decommissioned and new premises redeveloped in 2007. In 2013, the Graceville Centre continued to provide supported accommodation to women experiencing domestic violence or homelessness.

Cornelie Home, exterior

Description: 'Cornelie Home, exterior' is a digital copy of an item held in the Cornelie Court social homes closed lever-arch file at the Salvation Army Heritage Museum WA. The item is an undated photocopy with 'Graceville' written on the caption. This may mean the photograph was taken after 1903, when the Cornelie Home's name was changed to Graceville.

Graceville dining room and kitchen exterior, 1974

Description: 'Graceville dining room and kitchen exterior, 1974' is a digital copy of an image in the Graceville photos file held at the Salvation Army Heritage Museum WA.

Graceville Women's Industrial Home

Description: 'Graceville Women's Industrial Home' is a digital copy of an undated mounted print in the Graceville photos file held at the Salvation Army Heritage Museum WA. It possibly dates from around the 1920, when a series of images of Homes were produced for a Salvation Army book, Property Souvenir Australia: a record of progress. It is not known when the image was mounted and labelled.

Graceville, 1973

Description: 'Graceville, 1973' is a digital copy of a photograph held in the Graceville photos file at the Salvation Army Heritage Museum WA. The caption reads, 'Old Graceville, 1973' and is possibly the rear of the original Cornelie Home.
